

From the very beginning, Tremont West Development Corporation (TWDC) and the Tremont residents have asserted that welcoming visitors and residents to the neighborhood is a main objective. To this end, ParkWorks has assisted TWDC and local residents in establishing a priority list of sites and thoughtful and easily maintained design schematics that accentuate the character and brand of the neighborhood through community gateways.

“ParkWorks projects and programming bring added vitality to the Tremont neighborhood. Over the years, working with ParkWorks, Tremont West has been able to enhance long-time neighborhood centers and breathe new life into underutilized Greenspace.”

-- Chris Garland, Tremont West Development Corporation

ParkWorks has worked with Tremont West Development Corporation (TWDC) and landscape architect McKnight & Associates to establish designs for gateways at Scranton Road and Wade, West 7th and Starkweather and the eagerly anticipated Transit Waiting Environment at Lincoln Park. These succeed the newly built Quigley Road Turnaround at the terminus of West 14th Street, above the Steelyard Commons site – a captivating lotus flower and crown of the neighborhood’s south end. Current and future gateways not only welcome people to Tremont, but create a sense of community for all of Tremont and begin the process of rejoining the corners of a neighborhood divided by a major highway.
